Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Use various types of German dictionaries and reference books independently
2. Recognize and describe various ways of expressing time in German
3. Recognize and explain word formation patterns in German
4. Explain form and content organization, as well as the main characteristics of German media and academic texts
5. Describe main features of the vocabulary found in German media and academic texts (false pairs, synonyms, words with multiple meanings, terminology)
6. Describe the main characteristics of the culture and civilization of the German-speaking countries and regions
7. Identify and use expressions used for comparing, exemplifying and expressing reason and result in German
8. Identify and use expressions for providing arguments, expressing opinion, agreeing or disagreeing
9. Explain main ideas of media and academic texts in German and discuss in German issues related to their field of study

General Competencies

Students will be able: - to apply knowledge and understanding of concepts, principles and theory of the basic features and elements of media and academic texts in global understanding of media, professional and academic texts in German - to use dictionaries, grammar books and other available reference book in order to further develop their German language competencies - to apply knowledge on the culture and civilization of German-speaking countries in the profession - to present their opinions and attitudes on issues related to their field of study in German

1. Placement test. Dictionary work (types of dictionaries, dictionary entry, parts of speech)

2. Expressing time in German (tenses, time conjunctions and adverbs)
3. Form and content, as well as the main characteristics of media and academic texts in German
4. Reading comprehension (media texts on studying in Germany)
5. Word formation in German (composition, derivation)
6. Culture and civilization of German-speaking countries and regions
7. Print and electronic media in German-speaking countries (reading and listening comprehension)
8. Vocabulary of media and academic texts (false pairs in Croatian and German, synonyms, antonyms, words with multiple meanings, terminology)
9. Basic words and expressing for opening and closing of a presentation in German
10. Expressing opinion, providing arguments, agreeing and disagreeing in German
11. Comparing, expression reason and result, exemplifying in German
12. Reading comprehension (media texts on intercultural differences and politics)
13. Reading comprehension (academic texts on media, young people and politics)
14. Student presentations and discussion (possible topics: effective learning, media in Croatia and in German-speaking countries and regions, students in Croatia and in German-speaking countries and regions etc.)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate the ability to use bibliographic and other sources and independently select the relevant material in order to produce academic text.
2. Generate notes, use manuals, Internet resources and other research tools.
3. Apply and know the basic bibliographic standards of academic writing.
4. Demonstrate the ability to independently write academic text (written homework, seminar paper or the final paper) by employing standard procedures and norms of academic writing (in terms of logic, grammar, style, bibliography, graphics and ethics).
5. Demonstrate the ability to identify and correct errors and flaws in one's own and other people's academic text.

General Competencies

Apply standard academic writing tools in writing essays, written assignments and qualification theses (B.A. and M.A. thesis). • to search bibliographic databases and other sources when carrying out simple research assignments. Exhibit reading comprehension and analytic skills when reading academic text and media contents. Articulate and lay out attitudes and arguments, both in oral and written form.

Course Description

Course objectives:

1. explain the status of aesthetics (philosophy of art) as a research domain and a philosophical discipline,
2. explicate methodological conditions for defining art,
3. analyze the content of the main aesthetic concepts and aesthetic properties,
4. explicate the content of the main aesthetic theories,
5. analyze and evaluate strengths and weaknesses of particular aesthetic theories,
6. analyze and evaluate arguments for and against particular aesthetic theories.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define aesthetics as a research domain and a philosophical discipline
2. Define the main aesthetic concepts and aesthetic properties
3. List and interpret major aesthetic theories
4. Identify strengths and weaknesses of particular aesthetic theories

5. Evaluate the arguments for and against particular theories
6. Argue for one's own view of the nature of art

General Competencies

Students will be able to: (1) independently understand, evaluate and interpret theories and arguments used in debates on the philosophy of art; (2) develop their general abilities for philosophical analysis; (3) apply methods of analysis in new situations.

ANOVA Models

37814

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Mislav Stjepan
Žebec

Course Description

Systematic introducing the basic logic and series of operative analysis of variance (ANOVA) models as inferential statistical method based on central limit theorem, and directed to empirical data analysis obtained in experimental and quasi-experimental research. Generating at students an adoption and appropriate interpretation of basic concepts, logic and prerequisite assumptions of different ANOVA models, as well as of analysis of covariance (ANCOVA) models, necessary in psychological disciplines and for systematic acquisition of the other psychology subjects topics (undergraduate and graduate). Introducing to students a various multiple comparisons test in ANOVA designs (a priori and post hoc) and related prerequisite assumptions, advantages and limitations. Developing at students the skill of (1) recognition of situations where some of targeted ANOVA or ANCOVA models are used, (2) selection of adequate multiple comparisons tests inside the targeted model, (3) conduction of ANOVA/ANCOVA calculus in SPSS, and (4) detection of eventually unfulfilled prerequisite assumptions and application of necessary corrections. Preparing the students for conduction of minor empirical research by quasi-/experimental design, for adequate ANOVA models applications in related data analysis, and for scientific/professional report writing, in accordance to international standards.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 4th semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain statistical-mathematical logic of the calculus of (1) independent samples ANOVA (one-way and factorial), (2) repeated measures ANOVA, (3) mixed ANOVA model, (4) ANCOVA;
2. Name assumptions for specific ANOVA model application, assess their presence in a given problem situation and thereafter choose the adequate model
3. Arrange research design adequate for an ANOVA model application
4. Analyze empirical research findings with adequate ANOVA procedure by using SPSS program
5. Interpret the ANOVA results in terms of set up research problem
6. Categorize and describe specific tests of a priori and post hoc multiple comparisons in ANOVA designs
7. Distinguish ANOVA models of fixed and random factors

Lecturer in Charge

Izv. prof. dr.sc.
Vanja Šimičević

Course Description

The aim of this course is to enable the adoption and application of methodological competence of statistical methods and techniques of inferential statistics on the level of theory and practice. Course content includes the study of specific problems in the application of various methods for statistical analysis of data, and is expected applicability of certain methods of inferential statistics in response to specific research problems. The program potentially includes some of the existing methods that are primarily focused on the implementation and analysis of the obtained indicators of inferential statistics.

Study Programmes

- » Sociology (Studij) (required course, 5th semester, 3rd year)
- » Sociology (Studij) (required course, 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Prepare for a thorough insight into the specifics, advantages and limitations of particular methods of inferential statistics to analyze the data.
2. Apply adopted methodological knowledge in sociological research.
3. Use statistical software SPSS.
4. Select appropriate methodological procedures.
5. Plan the research activities related to the use of methods and techniques of descriptive statistics.
6. Argue the interpretation of results obtained using different statistical methods.
7. Select appropriate methodological procedures.
8. Summarize the results of the statistical analysis.

Prerequisites

Statistics for Social Research

General Competencies

Use the advanced statistical terms and information

Design a simple research project.

Organize the implementation of a simple research project.

Use the computer software for the analyses of qualitative and quantitative data.

Employ the adequate methodological approach in the research of social phenomena.

Use different social sciences methods in the analyses of the relevant data.

Employ the highest ethical norms in conducting of the social research with an aim of protecting the human subjects from any possible harm.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Sampling methods and properties of the sampling distribution.
2. Confidence Intervals of the Mean.
3. Confidence Intervals for Population Proportion.
4. Concepts of Hypothesis testing.
5. Concepts of Hypothesis testing. Tests of the Mean of a Normal Distribution.
6. Tests of the Population Proportion.
7. Tests of the Difference Between two Population Means. Big Independent Samples.
8. Tests of the Difference Between Two Population Proportions.
9. Tests of the Difference Between two Population Means. Small independent Samples.
10. Tests of the Difference Between two Population Means: Dependent Samples.
11. Analysis of Variances.

Approaching a text in Latin

37551

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Maja Matasović

Course Description

Students will learn how to analyze latin sentences. First they will have to determine grammatical role of the individual words, and after that their function within the sentence.

Study Programmes

» Latin language (Studij) (required course, 2nd semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define the following terms: predicate, finite verb, non finite verb, valency of the verbs, nucleus of the sentence, grammatical/logical subject, complement, object.
2. Differentiate various different types of the predicate.
3. Differentiate various different functions of the words in the sentence.
4. Explain use of the verb "sum, esse, fui".
5. Predict factors that determine the form of the anaphora.
6. Relate grammatical role with the function of the word in the sentence.

General Competencies

Differentiate parts of the sentence by its function.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Predicate and its recognizing.
2. Valency.
3. Subject and copulative verbs (especially sum, esse, fui).
4. Complements.
5. Objects.
6. Complex predicates.
7. Passive.
8. Attribute.
9. Apposition.

1. Apply theoretical knowledge through identifying errors in specific texts and in public communication, individually and in dialogue with others.
2. Define fundamental concepts of Croatian linguistic culture.
3. Analyze Croatian normative principles.
4. Analyze Croatian normative handbooks.
5. Describe normative divergences.
6. Apply the rules described in Croatian orthographies.

General Competencies

Raise the level of linguistic culture, practical literacy and understanding of basic normative principles in the areas of orthography, phonology, prosody, morphology, syntax and dictionary heritage.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Introduction to the Croatian linguistic culture: what is it and what is it for, terminology and concepts, definitions and bibliography
2. Concepts: standard literary language - the language of Croatian literature - standards and standardization, review of the recent history - functional styles, dialects
3. Council for Standard Croatian Language Norm
4. Contemporary Croatian normative acts and their application (orthographies, grammar books, dictionaries), network tools (dictionaries, corpora)

Basic Social Behaviour

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Zrinka Greblo
Jurakić

Course Description

The aim of the course is to familiarize students with theoretical explanations and determinants of human social behavior. Also, given that the social psychology is empirical science with well-developed set of methods for answering questions about social behavior, the emphasis of the course will be on describing a number of examples of socio-psychological research and consideration of their implementation.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 6th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Identify the extent of the influence of situational factors on human social behavior.
2. Apply knowledge of the socio-psychological concepts to everyday life and students life experience.
3. Analyze behavioral issues using theories and concepts from the perspective of social psychology
4. Discuss about socio-psychological concepts in daily life
5. Define basic concepts regarding interpersonal attraction, prosocial and aggressive behavior, and group processes and influences

General Competencies

Explain the fundamental principles of the ethics of psychology and relate the principles of the ethics of psychology to different areas of psychological practice. Integrate the knowledge of cultural differences and critically assess the general principles, standards of good practice and work which demonstrates respect for diversity in a professional manner.

Evaluate scientific knowledge for the purpose of generating research hypotheses and support the scientific approach to the acquirement of knowledge.

Course Description

The general aim of this course is understanding of fundamental principles of nervous system organization, morphology of human central nervous system and functional organization of sensory and motor systems.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 2nd semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Recognize basic parts of central nervous system at both micro- and macroscopic levels;
2. Recognize basic parts of neuron and types of glia cells;
3. Describe basic principles of functional and anatomical organization of sensory and motor systems in humans;
4. Describe mechanisms of sensory neural analysis at all hierarchical levels, from receptor to primary sensory cortex;
5. Explain the role of cortical and sub-cortical structures in motor planning and spatial orientation
6. Apply the acquired knowledge in understanding of biological foundations of complex mental functions.

General Competencies

Outline the historical development and theoretical approaches in the different branches of theoretical and applied psychology.
Integrate the knowledge of the fundamental psychological processes and characteristics (perception, memory, learning, motivation, emotions, personality, and social behaviour).

Course Description

Undergraduate thesis is a complete, comprehensive and highly independent obligation the fulfillment of which marks the students' completion of their undergraduate studies and in which the students must demonstrate their ability to independently use literature in the field or branch of science in which their studies are founded. The aim of this course is to allow the students to demonstrate their knowledge of the subject, the ability of independent work and use of literature, as well as the application of appropriate methodology. Double major students write their thesis on only one of their major studies.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Collect and critically study relevant literature;
2. Choose a thesis topic;
3. Write the thesis syllabus;
4. Plan the course of completion of the thesis within a well-defined frame;
5. Define problems, hypotheses and methods which will be used in order to reach predicted results;
6. Write a thesis in the extent of approximately 3500-4500 words (16 to 20 standard pages of text).

General Competencies

Apply, classify and distinguish between professional and scientific terminology in the area of research;

Identify, evaluate and use a variety of appropriate scientific-research methods in the field of social sciences or humanities, which are applied in the area of research;

Independently complete a thesis in the area of research;

Think in an interdisciplinary manner and respect various scientific methodologies and perspectives on specific issues and problems in the researched field of social sciences or humanities.

Write an undergraduate thesis in the Croatian or one of the world's languages in accordance with the scientific and ethical postulates.

Course Description

The aim of this course is to provide students with thorough understanding of biological foundations of complex cognitive human functioning.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Recognize basic parts of the central nervous system, morpho-functional division of the human cerebral cortex, its laminar organization and neuron morphology;
2. Explain the basic principles of cortico-cortical and cortico-subcortical connections crucial for processing of higher cognitive functions;
3. Explain the principles of neuronal activation in visual and auditory association cortex involved in higher level of information processing, and the role of cerebral cortex in planning, control and execution of voluntary movements and space orientation;
4. Explain the role of higher order association areas in language, working memory, reasoning, planning and other human specific higher cognitive functions, as well as the connections between higher association areas, limbic system and other subcortical structures involved in emotional behaviour, motivational drives, biorhythms and homeostasis;
5. Apply acquired theoretical and practical knowledge in understanding the underlying mechanisms of psychological development and related disorders
6. Apply acquired knowledge in practical use of neuroimaging techniques (fMRI, PET, EEG, MEG);
7. Use educational multimedia online neuroscience resources in written reports and oral presentations;
8. Create a multimedia presentation showing clinical examples of correlations between brain damage and functional outcomes;
9. Analyze scientific review articles from the field of neurobiology of higher cognitive functions;
10. Explain and present the role of biology in normal everyday behaviour and in the onset of psychological disorders.

General Competencies

Explain the biological and neurobiological foundations of psychological processes and behaviour.

Identify the characteristics, mechanisms and models of psychological development and evaluate the effects of various biological and social factors on the physical, cognitive, social, and emotional development.

Value the basic contents from the complementary social, humanistic and biomedical disciplines.

1. The role of biological factors in behaviour: trends in brain research in the world, the role of genetic background in shaping of brain structure, the impact of other developmental factors on brain structure, the role of the neural network structure in behaviour, the role of psychologists in brain research; the relationship between growing complexity in brain structure and growing complexity in psychomotor and cognitive functions during phylogenesis; functional division of the cerebral cortex: primary, parasensory and general associative areas; recognition on the scheme.
2. Functional anatomy and histology of the cerebral cortex: laminar organization, allocortex, paleocortex, archicortex, mezocortex, neocortex; recognition of layers on the scheme.
3. Cellular structure and organization of cortical connections: pyramidal neurons and interneurons, afferent systems of the cerebral cortex, laminar organization of afferent and efferent connections; features of cortical neurons; the pyramidal neurons (morphological, chemical and functional characteristics), GABAergic interneurons, baskets cells, axo-axonal neurons, columnar "double bouquet" neurons: identification on the scheme.
4. Brain chemical anatomy and reticular formation: neurotransmitters (glutamate, GABA, acetylcholine, noradrenaline, serotonin, dopamine, peptides), brain stem reticular formation and the continuum toward diencephalon and telencephalon; activating brain systems, central limbic central continuum: identifying limbic continuum nuclei on the scheme.
5. Ascending reticular activating system (ARAS): MFB, centrencephalon, mediobasal telencephalon; functional organization of the limbic system; structures of the limbic system: Papez circuit, the amygdala, the central limbic continuum, mediobasal (septal) area, hypothalamus, hippocampus, fornix; identification on the scheme.
6. EEG and general cortical activity: EEG waves, methods of monitoring the functional activity of the brain, evoked potentials; neurobiology of consciousness and sleep: thalamic reticular nucleus, sleep spindles, levels of consciousness, sleep cycles, REM stages; demonstration of the EEG; multimedia EEG presentation.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. List the most relevant information on the Communist Party of Yugoslavia (CPY) for a period of 1945 up in 1990.,
2. Explain the concept of opponents CPY on the social and political level,
3. Define the basic problems of interrelationships of CPY and its dissidents,
4. Explain the causal link of this correlation during the period,
5. Explain historical processes that have marked the history of Croatia in this period,
6. Describe how CPY shaped country in this period.

General Competencies

After successful completion of their studies, students will be able to: define the historical processes inherent to different historical periods, clearly and concisely describe the basic course of historical events of the period, explain the cause and effect relationships between historical events and historical processes, identify the basic problems of interpretation of historical events and processes, express their opinions about historical events and historical processes.

Croatia and the First World War

173130

Lecturer in Charge

Izv. prof. dr.sc.
Darko Vitek

Course Description

In croatian historiography First World War had not been thoroughly researched. On course "Croatia and the First World War" political, economical and social changes that occurred in Triune Kingdom of Croatia, Slavonia and Dalmatia from July 1914 until the end of 1918 will be analyzed. On classes social changes caused by introduction of the state of emergency, mobilisations, conscriptions and consequences of economic crisis will be studied. Role of Croatia and Slavonia as centers for food supplying of Austria-Hungary's armed forces and as centers for food smuggling to Austria will be analyzed as well.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain the influence of a state of emergency on society as a whole
2. Analyze basic knowledge of the role and significance of the Croatian lands from 1914 to 1918.
3. Describe changes in citizens' way of life during the war
4. Compare the economic circumstances in Croatia with the economic circumstances in other parts of Monarchy
5. Define the social, political and economic consequences of Austria-Hungary's downfall
6. Analyze processes of social and state transition from peacetime into a state of emergency
7. Define causative consequences of social, economic and political changes that occurred during the First World War

1. Introductory lecture. General data about the First World War. First World War in Croatian historiography. Sources for historical research of Croatian history during First World War period. Political situation in Croatia from the beginng of the 20th century until the beginng of the First World War.
2. Croatia from 1914 until 1918. Civil society during the state of emergency – imposing of various restrictions on citizens. Mobilisations and constant conscriptions during war time.
3. Croatian daily newspapers and magazines from the war period. Journalists' and editorial boards' ability to work under censorship.
4. War reality and propaganda. Disharmony of published news and soldiers' stories. Rumours about horrors from battlefields which were narrated by citizens and caused panic.
5. Economic circumstances during the war. Despite state intervention (requisition and provision) the crisis was constant and deeper. Importance of Banal Croatia for food provisioning of Austro-Hungarian Armed Forces and as a centre for food smuggling into Austria.
6. Living conditions in Banal Croatia's cities. „New“ citizens – refugees and prisoners-of-war.
7. Village life 1914 – 1918. Differences between certain regions (Primorje, Lika, Zagorje, Slavonija).
8. Provisioning of urban population. Possibilities for getting supplies through systems of aprovisation/rationalisation or the black market. Changes in food preparation, increased consumption of canned food and various substitutes.
9. Intellectuals and warriors. Croatia's prominent individuals during the war.
10. Humanitarian work, care for soldiers' families, for wounded soldiers, organisation of food supplying for children from poor Croatian regions.
11. The educational system during the war. Problems of elementary, secondary and faculty education caused by mobilisation of professors and by using school buildings for accommodation of soldiers or as auxiliary military hospitals.
12. Cultural life – concerts, theatrical performances, exhibitions, fine and musical arts.
13. Social life – coffee houses, cinemas. Filming and cinema projections of the first Croatian movies.
14. Criminality – organisation and work problems of Zagreb's police units.

15. The end of the First World War. Downfall of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, activity of the „Zeleni kadar“, post-war chaos and entry into the new state community.

Grading

Student activity shall be monitored throughout classes which will reflect on the final grade. Class attendance is obligatory. Final exam is in written form.

Course Description

Course objectives is to bring closer to the students the Croatian medieval history and point out to them how the events and processes are intertwined on the Croatian and European level, in the political, social and cultural sense. The history of Croats in the Middle Ages was marked, after their arrival, by the creation of their own state, which has experienced ups and downs depending on the internal and external political factors. Uniting with the Kingdom of Hungary in a personal union (upon the arrival of the Arpad dynasty on Croatian throne) and the increasingly powerful Venetian presence on the eastern coast marked the history of Croatia during the period of the High Middle Ages, at the end of which, as a result of the Ottoman conquest, Croatia will be reduced to remnants of the remains. The underlying aim of the course therefore is to introduce to the students how these processes affected the medieval political, social and cultural development of the Croatian lands.

Study Programmes

- » Croatology (Studij) (required course, 1st semester, 1st year)
- » Croatology (Studij) (required course, 1st semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Describe the socio-political processes that affected the Croatian territory during the Middle Ages.
2. Explain why the Arpad dynasty came to hold the Croatian throne.
3. Analyze how historical circumstances led to the reduction of the Croatia to "the remnants of the remains".
4. Compare the medieval social and cultural development of the Croatian lands in the European context.

General Competencies

The course contributes to the acquisition of knowledge on the Croatian medieval history.

Lecturer in Charge

Prof. dr.sc.
Ljiljana Marks

Course Description

On the texts of mythical and historical Croatian oral traditions and legends the course aims to consider and review their thematic, stylistic, literary and cultural-historical features, demonstrate the feasibility of different approaches to research, point out the longevity and the large number of observed phenomena and the important role they play in the shaping of regional and Croatian identity. Their adaptability to the latest media and genre relevance shall be emphasized as well.

Study Programmes

- » Croatology (Studij) (elective courses, 1st semester, 1st year)
- » Croatology (Studij) (elective courses, 3rd semester, 2nd year)
- » Croatology (Studij) (elective courses, 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Analyze the facts;
2. Analyze the tasks (text and source interpretation);
3. Explain prose oral literary genres;
4. Apply research methods in other areas of the humanities;
5. Explain theoretical texts;
6. Prepare independent field research of traditions.

General Competencies

Analyze and synthesize facts and theoretical knowledge on the research area subject matter; the possibility of establishing links with other knowledge in Croatology (literary, linguistic, historical, ethnological, anthropological); making of independent conclusions about the importance of research in humanities; raising the awareness about intangible heritage and its importance in the national corpus.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Establishing oral tradition as an oral literary genre: dilemmas and problems.

- » History (Studij) (elective courses / working groups, 6th semester, 3rd year)
- » History (Studij) (elective courses / working groups, 6th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Identify the key factors of the modernization process
2. Point out the multidisciplinary nature of the concept of the social modernization
3. Identify the main features of the modernization of Croatian society in a wider European context
4. Explain the differences in the direction and speed of the process of modernization of Croatian society in relation to other European societies
5. Compare and explain the social development of particular Croatian regions
6. Analyze the fundamental aspects of everyday life in which social modernization has manifested
7. Define hypothesis about the impact of social processes on particular historical events

Course Description

Introducing students to different kinds of data, gathered in professional and scientific examination/measurement, and enabling students for their recognition. Presenting different kinds of empirical data description via tables, graphs, measures of central tendency and variability, and preparing the students for successful selection of the appropriate descriptors for specific kind of data. Systematic informing of students on procedures for determination the position of individuals result in a group, and procedures for evaluating the relations between two or more sets of data, but also to train the skills of appropriate application of these procedures. Training students in critically choosing proper descriptive statistics procedures based on their advantages and limitations, as well as in independently conducting of the procedures and proper interpreting of the results attained. Demonstrating crucial concepts of probability theory for statistical procedures in social disciplines (especially random variables) and integrating them into students understanding of social processes, as a basis for explaining test statistics and related theoretical distributions in inferential statistics.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 2nd semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Identify kinds of data gathered in professional, or scientific in examination/measurement, that define possible statistical procedures
2. Choose the most appropriate procedures for description and presentation of some data set, related to one or more variables
3. Illustrate examination results via the most appropriate graphs and tables
4. Calculate all measures of central tendency, variability and position of an individual result in a group
5. Apply basic concepts of probability calculus in social processes comprehension
6. Recognize characteristics of discrete and continuous random variables and related theoretical distributions
7. Evaluate the importance of normal distribution and apply their characteristics in solving problems/exercises in psychological phenomena that assume normal distribution of related variable
8. Demonstrate and describe interrelation two and more observed variables by calculating appropriate correlation indicators.

Lecturer in Charge

Prof. dr.sc.
Zdravko Petanjek

Course Description

The general aim of this course is to familiarize students with basic histogenetic and morphogenetic concepts in human brain development as well as the development of other species, from insects to primates, in order to gain a deeper and broader understanding of biological foundations of higher cognitive functions and other human-specific processes. Specific aims are elaborated according to teaching units.

Study Programmes

- » Psychology (Studij) (elective courses, 2nd semester, 1st year)
- » Psychology (Studij) (elective courses, 4th semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Recognize basic morphological and histological characteristics of different developmental stages;
2. Explain the role and the relationship between biological predisposition and external factors in neural network development;
3. Apply acquired theoretical and practical knowledge in working with children with developmental disorders;
4. Apply acquired knowledge in practical use of neuroimaging techniques (fMRI, PET, EEG, MEG) when analysing developmental disorders in children and adolescents;
5. Use educational multimedia online neuroscience resources in written reports and oral presentations;
6. Create multimedia presentations using examples that show correlation between the development of certain brain areas and the changes in the psychological status of the condition;
7. Analyze scientific review papers from developmental neurobiology;
8. Explain and present the role of biological factors in the determination of neural network development of the human cerebral cortex.

General Competencies

3. Explain the biological and neurobiological foundations of psychological processes and behaviour.
4. Identify the characteristics, mechanisms and models of psychological development and evaluate the effects of various biological and social factors on the physical, cognitive, social, and emotional development.
13. Value the basic contents from the complementary social, humanistic and biomedical disciplines.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Brain morphogenesis during the embryonic and fetal period; brain morphogenesis during the perinatal and postnatal development.
2. Histogenetic processes during the embryonic and early fetal period; histogenetic processes during the fetal and perinatal period.
3. Imaging of the fetal brain; structural-chemical characteristics of the fetal brain organisation.
4. Prenatal and perinatal brain damage; transient fetal behaviour - comparison of the development of a child with and without perinatal brain damage.
5. Ingrowth of axons, neuronal differentiation and the establishment of cortical connections; synaptogenesis - the role of activity and interaction with the environment.
6. Excessive production of synapses as a developmental event - phylogenetic comparison; selective stabilization of synapses as a mechanism of environmental shaping of brain structure.
7. Functional changes in brain activity during childhood and adolescence; the importance of recording functional brain activity in development disorders.
8. Changes in brain neural circuits during adolescence; risky behaviour during adolescence - biological correlates of functional brain activity changes during adolescence.
9. Neurobiology of critical periods during human development; determination of periods of critical developmental on the basis structural-functional correlation.
10. Neurobiology of autism and Asperger's syndrome; neurobiology of other developmental disorders: Down syndrome, Williams syndrome, attention disorders.
11. The role of early diagnosis in developmental disorders; brain imaging and early diagnostics for developmental disorders.
12. Time pattern of brain plasticity during development; imaging of brain plasticity during development.
13. Protracted period of human brain maturation; evolutionary characteristics of the development of human brain ("life history theory").
14. Macroscopic features of brain evolution; histological features of brain evolution; evolutionary aspect and biological basis for the emergence of higher cognitive functions in humans.
15. Comparative anatomy and histology of the cerebral cortex in primates; evolutionary aspects of neurobiology of the development of higher cognitive functions in primates; comparative anatomy of primate brain using imaging methods.

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Ana Butković

Course Description

Explain individual differences to students as well as meaning of those differences to society in general and psychology in particular. Explain measurement of individual differences. Look at individual differences in abilities, personality and creativity. Analyze genetic and environmental contributions to those differences. Describe development of theories and models of intelligence. Describe development of theories and models of personality. Argue for importance of intelligence and personality in everyday life.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain and distinguish between different theoretical approaches in personality;
2. Explain and distinguish between different theoretical approaches in intelligence;
3. Tell what we can and can not conclude from results of behavioral genetic studies;
4. Interpret results of research in differential psychology;
5. Analyze scientific studies of individual differences.

General Competencies

1. Outline the historical development and theoretical approaches in the different branches of theoretical and applied psychology.
2. Integrate the knowledge of the fundamental psychological processes and characteristics (perception, memory, learning, motivation, emotions, personality, and social behaviour).
5. Compare theoretical approaches to the study of individual differences.
9. Evaluate scientific knowledge for the purpose of generating research hypotheses and support the scientific approach to the acquirement of knowledge.
10. Judge scientific and professional papers in the field of social sciences, humanities, and biomedicine.
16. Organize and present professional and scientific reports based on empirical data using scientific literature and demonstrating respect for international standards, independently or in a team.

Early-Modern Croatian Literature

37436

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Viktoria Franić
Tomić

Course Description

Subject of instruction is divided into fifteen sections. They are formed on the basis of chronology but at the same time they include the thematic and genre systems. Subject covers the following canonical authors of the Croatian Renaissance: Benedikt Kotruljević, Ivan Česmički, Marko Marulić, poets of Ranjina Collection, Mavro Vetranović, Nikola Nalješković, Hanibal Lucić, Vinko Pribojević, Petar Hektorović, Peter Zoranić, Marin Držić, Mikša Pelegrinović, Sabo Bobaljević, Antun Sasin, Brne Krnarutić, Dominko Zlatarić, Matija Vlačić, Faust Vrančić. Their texts as well as texts less typical but not less important written by literary personalities of the second grade are going to help students in building diachronic view of dominant genres in literature of early modern time. In doing so, we stress the genre of Renaissance drama in comparison with medieval poetics of the space, then also we are going to study profoundly the occurrence of tragedies in the second half of the sixteenth century, than the development of poetry of early renaissance in relation to tendencies of mannerism in early modern poetry. Also will be studied poetic and non poetic nonfiction and fiction texts from that era, as well as didactic questions. Students will acquire the knowledge of ideological concepts and ideologies as well as the changes in style and stylistic formation especially with regard to the relationship between the Renaissance and Medieval and then with the crisis of Renaissance known in stylistic terms as mannerism. In this part of subject with special attention will be studied the books of Burckhardt, Huizinga and Hocke. In details will be described literature in Latin that was established in renaissance Dubrovnik and Dalmatia and also at the Korvin court in Buda With students will be discussed the issues of Protestants within the Croatian literature and its relations with humanistic tradition. With special attention students will be familiarized with the phenomenon of women in the Renaissance, especially with the texts of Marija Gundulić Gozze and Nada Vittoria Speranza Bona. For students will be prepared material on the comparative aspects of Croatian Renaissance literature, especially the relationships with Italian literature of that time, but also the Croatian texts from renaissance will be compared with similar examples in other European literature. During the work we are going to study the numerous texts from the edge of literary space, especially scientific, history writing and philosophical works, as well as those who, though not written with the literary intention show the spiritual level and preoccupations of that time. During work with students will be discussed work of the leading writers who wrote not only in the Croatian language but in other languages such as Italian and Latin.

1. The role of Italians in Croatian humanism: Giovanni of Ravenna, Ciriacco from Ancona, Filippo de Diversis, Tideo Acciarini, Ludovico Beccadelli. The book Asian War by Coriolanus Cippico. Croatian role at the Korvin Court in Buda. Nikola

The final grade is the result of class activity and attendance. The final exam is written exam.

Course Description

The main objectives of the course are to describe Early Modern period in simple and clear way, to explain interconnections of events and processes on a global level such as: absolutism, religion questions, scientific revolutions, witch-hunt, global trade, explorations etc.). All those topics will be used to compare cultural and political encounters on global level.

Study Programmes

- » History (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)
- » History (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Describe processes that shaped Early Modern period in Europe and World
2. Explain chronology stereotypes of the period
3. Identify the most important person and events 1500-1800
4. Explain cause and effect relations of the most important events of the period
5. List processes that 'prepared' Europe and the World for modern times
6. Evaluate specificities of the European regions and how they influenced the acceptance of Early Modern socio-political novelties
7. Appraise different historiographic interpretation of Early Modern period
8. Relate Early Modern social processes with contemporary ones
9. Compare processes and events in different European monarchies (France, Spain, Habsburg Monarchy etc)

General Competencies

After finishing the programme student will be able to:
describe historical processes,
identify the most important persons and institutions in the Croatian and the World history,
compare historical processes of different periods,
summarize basic information of the Croatian and the World history, explain cause and effect relations of historical events and processes.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Class overview, schedule, requirements
2. Early Modern World: general overview
3. Europe and the Renaissance

Course Description

The aim of the course is that students adopt a theoretical knowledge of the basics of the economic history of the ancient world and specific instructions as in regional terms, and that this knowledge is educated to understand the economic processes in antiquity. English Restoration and the Glorious Revolution- Rise and Fall of the House of Stuart

173108

Lecturer in Charge

Izv. prof. dr.sc.
Alexander
Buczynski

Course Description

What role did the restoration of the Stuart dynasty play in the political development of England and Scotland during the second half of the 17th century? Who were the main political figures and to what extent did they influence domestic and foreign policy? How were King Charles II and his brother James II perceived by public opinion? What circumstances led to the Glorious Revolution and what were its consequences? These questions inform our investigation of an episode which consolidated England's status as a constitutional monarchy. We will concentrate mostly on England exploring local concerns within a national context. We will not only analyze relevant secondary literature on this topic, but also introduce Samuel Pepys' diaries as a indispensable source of the time.

Food and the Modern Period

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Ivana Jukić

Course Description

The Early Modern period was stricken with many tragedies: high rate of poverty, endless wars, epidemics, 'little ice age', famine; to stay alive and to avoid hunger was the main concern of many. The course objectives are to explain how food exchange, trade and production was prerequisite to society order but also social unrest and disbalance. However, Early Modern period was stricken with renaissance luxury and carpe diem way of life, so course will demonstrate how food was also symbol of social hierarchy, and how our contemporary menus are in many ways result of the Early Modern global food exchange.

Forms of Communication in Journalism

37896

Lecturer in Charge

Prof. dr.sc.
Nada Zgrabljic
Rotar

Course Description

The aim of the course is to create a routine students for becoming familiar with and engaging in genres of objective journalism—news story, report and interview—and teaching students how to recognize a publication-worthy event, how to obtain information and process it into a news story or report.

Study Programmes

- » Communication Sciences (Studij) (required course, 2nd semester, 1st year)
- » Communication Sciences (Studij) (required course, 2nd semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate knowledge functioning of the media / editorial board.
2. Identify and write the required journalistic forms.
3. Demonstrate the ability to independently monitor course of events.
4. Demonstrate the skills of independent collection and processing of information.
5. Demonstrate the skills of independent news writing, reporting..
6. Demonstrate the skills of independent independently conduct an interview.

General Competencies

Apply knowledge of the basic concepts of journalism, primarily those related to the types of information and news media coverage and practical work of journalists. Knowledge of the theoretical and practical level of basic, informative journalistic forms. Ability to independently recognize important media events and monitoring them.

Fundamental Problems of Philosophy

37710

Lecturer in Charge

Izv. prof. dr.sc.
Tomislav
Bračanović

Course Description

The objective of the course is to introduce students to some basic problems in philosophy (e.g. the problem of knowledge, the body-mind problem, the problem of language and meaning, and the problem of God's existence), and to demonstrate the appropriate way of reading and analysing philosophical texts (of authors such as Bertrand Russell, René Descartes, George Berkeley, Gilbert Ryle, Edmund Gettier, Willard V. O. Quine, John Locke and others), and to show them how to argue in philosophical discussions.

Study Programmes

- » Communication Sciences (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 1st semester, 1st year)
- » Communication Sciences (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 3rd semester, 2nd year)
- » Communication Sciences (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 5th semester, 3rd year)

- » Psychology (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 1st semester, 1st year)
- » Sociology (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 1st semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Identify and explain some of the central philosophical problems and theories
2. Construct and set forth a number of significant philosophical arguments, and to explain their importance
3. Compare various competing views related to problems discussed during the course
4. Evaluate such views, as well as a number of arguments proposed as their support
5. Connect different philosophical problems and theories
6. Connect different philosophical disciplines and their problems

Fundamentals of Cellular Biology and Genetics

115576

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Sanja Darmopil

Course Description

The general objectives of the course are to learn of the role of genetic factors in the normal behavior and in the event of occurrence of mental illnesses and to understand the basic principles of cellular organization of the central nervous system. Specific objectives are elaborated according to the topics of teaching.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 1st semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Identify the basic parts of the cell,
2. Explain the principles of translation and transcription, the role of proteins in cellular processes,
3. Explain the principles of inheritance, the methods of regulation of gene expression,
4. Apply the acquired knowledge to understanding the mechanisms of emergence and inheritance of hereditary diseases and disorders,
5. Use e-web materials in the field of cell biology and genetics in the preparation of presentations,
6. Develop a tree of inheritance of different genetic disorders (autosomal dominant-recessive, sex-linked),
7. Analyze the reviewed scientific articles in the field of mental disorder genetics,
8. Explain and present the role of genetic factors in behavior, especially in the development of mental disorders and abnormal behavior,
9. Identify the basic parts of the central nervous system at the microscopic level,
10. Identify the basic parts of neurons and types of glial cells.

Course Description

The aim of the course is to teach students the application and methods of the market oriented and advertising research. To introduce to them the basic terms and concepts of market and advertising together with the main research methods in the field. To train them on how to carry out main tasks and duties of market researchers.

Study Programmes

» Sociology (Studij) (elective courses I., 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define, classify and explain concept of the market in classical sociology.
2. Apply sociological models and methods for the purpose of market and advertising research.
3. Demonstrate process of market research with its basic division on exploratory, descriptive and causal research.
4. Contrast primary and secondary data and their sources.
5. Define and explain application of the market research.

General Competencies

Upon successfully passed exam, students will be able to:

Design a simple research project.

Use the computer software for the analyses qualitative data.

Develop the research question related to the subject/process/phenomenon of social interest.

Use different social sciences methods in the analyses of the relevant data.

Employ the highest ethical norms in conducting of the social research with an aim of protecting the human subjects from any possible harm.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Introduction: sociologist as market researcher
2. Defining market in classical sociology
3. Market, market society and the process of marketization
4. Process of commodification

5. Application of sociological models and methods in market and advertising research

Gender Issues in Early Modern Croatian Literature

130425

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Viktorija Franić
Tomić

Course Description

The methodological foundations of this course are heavily influenced by contemporary studies and theories of gender issues and are based on the knowledge of women's writing in the Croatian literature. During the study of this course, students will be introduced to the most prominent examples of women and children writings, as also with the documents on family life and its interpreters and perception of this issue through the centuries. While studying this course, students will be introduced to the most important theoretical and scientific books and essays that deal with gender issues, such as studying of the recent critical practice on this issues in Croatia. Special attention will be given to the authors whose inauguration in the Croatian literary canon is associated with the ideological context. During the course these processes will be noticed in the medieval legends, will be studied in Kotruljević descriptions of woman and her place in the society of the renaissance merchants, then significant attention will be given to the examples of womanhood and masculine ideals in the tradition of love poems influenced by Petrarch and his school. The special interest is going to be directed to renaissance tragedies anti woman statements in their texts. The course offers a very innovative insights into gender issues on the opuses of Marko Marulić, Marin Držić, Nikola Nalješković and Mavro Vetranović. Methodological basis used in those analysis and insights the inspirer was found in the new historicism studies of nonfictional and fictional texts. The great number of previously unexplored subjects will be opened such as gender interpretation of Zrinski and Frankopan conspiracy and the role of Katarina Zrinski and his daughter Jelena . The literary work of Renaissance women will be studied in the works of authors from Dubrovnik especially such as literary circle of Bunić sisters, than in the circle around Cvijeta Zuzorić and their friend Marija Gundulić, than Anica Bošković and Lukrcija Bogašinović the author of four epic poems. Course includes seminar papers at the end of the work in class .In those papers students will explore gender issues and aspects of that subject to the present day.

1. Examples of the rebellion in the Croatian medieval literature. The issue of gender transgression in the holy texts and attitude of authority towards it. The opposition of male and female saints.

2. Medieval legislation and women. Examples in the Statute of Dubrovnik from 1278. Medicine and women in the early modern period. The case of the treatment of syphilis in the renaissance Dubrovnik. Amathus Lusitanus book Centuriae as a source for gender studies.

Grading

Students are required to actively participate in all forms of teaching. Monitored activity of students during the teaching process. Each of program assignments including the elaboration of seminar participates in the formation of the final rating. Students commitment will be tested by passing a regular examination period in written and oral exam.

3. Literary myth of Tristan and Isolde and its metamorphosis from the Middle Ages to Croatian XXth century author Radovan Ivšić. The concept of troubadour love. Abelard and Heolisa as an example of medieval love.
4. Kotruljević's book Sulla Mercatura e mercante perfetto with regard to gender issues. The social situation of children in modern history. Mavro Vetranović's poem about the illegitimate children Pjesanca spurjanom. Marulić's sister Bira. Marulić on biblical saint widow Judith and on usefulness of lies. Comparing of Judith and historical sacrifice of Mila Gojsalić. Judith as an exemplary figure in the Malleus Maleficarum.
5. Marin Držić. Fortuna has been described as a woman. Women in his life and works. Amazon women female warriors in the literature. Aretino's Imaginations compared with the historical and literary courtesans in renaissance Italy. Hecuba and Polyxena: relation. Maruša from Dubrovnik and the story of her husband.
6. Helen of Troy in Croatian and world literature. Novel Rumanac trojski. Hanibal Lucić, Nikola Nalješковиć, Ivan Bunić, Junije Palmotić. The issue of gender in Lucić's Slave Girl. Wedding rituals.
7. Mythical and historical portrait of Cvijeta Zuzorić. Marija Gundulić and her husband Nikola Bunić and his studies on beauty and love. Comparison of his texts with Firenzuolo's catalog of elements that form feminine beauty. Vittoria Nada Speranza Bona Bunić as the first early modern woman author of polemics. Marcia Grisogono from Zadar and poems dedicated to her. Milica Koriolanović and the solution of secret signs in the Hanibal Lucić's collection.
8. Reinterpretation of narrative strategies in the dramatic works of Mavro Vetranović. The myth of Orpheus, Biblical narrative about Abraham, Sarah and Isaac, Biblical drama Joseph and his brothers. Lopudska sirotica and metamorphosis of its mythical origins. Position of Abraham's wife Sarah in literary and theological texts from all epoch. Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Analyze literary and non-literary texts in accordance with the methodological instruments which the students will acquire and then with their help will be capable to interpret gender issues with regard to the most effective methodology.
2. Analyze of changes in the treatment of gender issues during various epoch and capability to explain the causes of these changes from the ideological point of view and also through the changes of poetic conventions and norms.
3. Analyze individual literary works from the perspective of gender.
4. Develop of the ability to read and to interpret literary works as sources for the history of ideas, of mentality and of gender
5. Analyze of gender issues in the general history of the world history and culture as well as to define the most important Croatian examples of "female" writings or the literature about women.
6. Develop of an interdisciplinary approach to the study of Croatian culture
7. Develop of possibility to define appropriate research topics associated with Croatian cultural heritage
8. Develop of possibility in applying research methods used in the humanities (language. literature. history. art history. archaeology. philosophy and the like)

Humanities in the Information Age

144634

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Mladen Tomorad

Course Description

The course objective is to present to the students how new information technologies serve in scientific research work in history science and how they can be used for disseminating research results to the wide public. Students will be presented with new possibilities of finding scientific informations; they will be presented where to find them using internet and relevant data bases; they will learn how to make searchings. They will be offered a new computational possibilities for organising all the collected bibliographical informations. Between other subjects there will be treated the new way of communication inside the academic community.

Study Programmes

» History (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Analyze and distinguish the relevant databases, the institutional catalogues relevant for historical work and other sources of scientific information
2. Analyze and search periodicals inside the journals in Open Access (hrčak, doaj...)
3. Use the openaire portals moving between different institutional repositories and searching for literature and desired informations
4. Use different social networks for making contacts with scientists all around the world and spreading personal scientific collaboration
5. Collect informations about newest published papers using social networks for scientists
6. Create personal databases for organizing metadates; search and analyse them easily as possible
7. Create documents in collaboration with students and colleagues in the contemporaneous internet connection (Google Documents)
8. Use cloud service technologies for synchronizing documents on two or more computers (Google Drive, Moj oblak)

Course Description

The goal of the course is to acquaint the students with the historical development as well as political and philosophical foundations of human rights, the main concepts, ideas and controversies of the discipline, as well as the international, regional and national systems of human rights protection, so that they could apply in practice the knowledge gained. That way, the students will be encouraged to work for the promotion and the protection of human rights in their daily and professional lives.

Study Programmes

» Sociology (Studij) (elective courses I., 2nd semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define basic human rights
2. Explain the basic theoretical concepts of human rights
3. Distinguish the different human rights theories
4. Identify and analyse violations of human rights in practice, its causes and consequences
5. Evaluate different human rights policies and practices
6. Apply innovative solutions to the problems in human rights theory and practice and reconstruct traditional canon of human rights
7. Argue the importance of the values of dignity and equality, the basic values of human rights

General Competencies

Use the general knowledge of society and of social processes.

Explain the initial assumptions of the different political, religious and cultural orientations.

Conform to a teamwork with co-workers from various disciplines, of different attitudes and value orientations.

Plan own engagement in resolving of the various social issues.

Explain the key structural factors that are shaping society.

Illustrate the social questions in the context of social class, ethnicity, gender, religion, capitalism, individualization, nationalism and globalization.

Grading

The final grade will be result of class activity and attendance. The final exam is written exam.

Course Description

The course objectives are to describe Hungarian past and relate it to the history of neighbouring countries and European history in general. Due to the fact that Croatia was in centuries long political union with Hungary, course will analyze and compare histories of both countries and demonstrate how they influenced each other and created perception of the Other.

Study Programmes

» History (Studij) (required course, 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain complexity of Hungarian past from 9th to 21st Century.
2. Define major issues of the Hungarian past shaped by its geographic position.
3. Relate events and person important for Hungarian past.
4. Explain cause and effect relations of different events within Hungarian past.
5. Demonstrate how different processes were conditioned by Hungarian geopolitical status.
6. Compare events in Hungarian past with Croatian experiences.
7. Evaluate contributions of Hungarian culture to European civilization.

General Competencies

After finishing the programme student will be able to:
outline in clear and simple way the major historical events from ancient to contemporary times;
explain cause and effect relations of historical events and processes;
construct a historical context;
compare historical processes of different periods;
differentiate specificities of historical periods;
combine a different historical processes.

Inferential Statistics

37813

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Mislav Stjepan
Žebec

Course Description

Introducing students to the basic concepts of inferential statistics and enabling them for statistical inference from sample to population, using basic parametric and non-parametric procedures; Explaining Central Limit Theorem and its implications on calculation of confidence intervals for μ , and on various forms of t-tests. Generating students adoption of statistical power concept, its importance, determinants and calculation in various test situations. Generating students systematic insight in prerequisite assumptions of specific inferential test and their application in proper choosing of parametric/nonparametric procedures for statistical hypothesis testing. Training the students skill for autonomous usage of parametric/non-parametric statistical tests for central tendencies measures, dispersion measures or correlation. Preparing students for critical analyzing of professional and scientific texts employing the basic inferential statistics procedures.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Distinguish statistical from non-statistical inference
2. Interpret and use one-tailed and two-tailed statistical hypothesis testing;
3. Generalize the basic logic of rejecting and not rejecting the null hypotheses (H_0) at t-test on all other tests (F, χ^2)
4. Reproduce derivations of test statistics and the characteristics of related theoretical distributions
5. Identify prerequisite assumptions of specific inferential tests and by using them properly decide to use or not the specific test.
6. Explain the errors in statistical testing and the importance of statistical power concept
7. Apply parametric and non-parametric statistical procedures for testing the hypotheses on central tendency, dispersion and correlation measures.
8. Calculate the confidence interval for central tendency, dispersion and correlation measures.
9. Evaluate advantages and limitations of specific hypotheses testing procedures applied in solving a research problem, and evaluate the selection of the most appropriate procedure.

Introduction to Clinical Psychology

38645

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Lovorka Brajković

Course Description

The aim of the course is to provide students with the basics of clinical psychology, which includes: defining the field of clinical psychology, introduction to the activities of clinical psychologists, general overview of the historical development of clinical psychology, clinical approach, the key issues of assessment and measurement in clinical psychology, and specific of research in clinical psychology.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 6th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define and evaluate the criteria for defining normality.
2. Compare the field of clinical psychology with other areas of psychology and related disciplines.
3. Compare and analyze the differences and similarities between different theoretical systems in clinical psychology
4. Explain the specifics of the clinical approach.
5. Assess critically the basic principles and methods of psychological assessment.
6. Distinguish and evaluate specific clinical interventions.
7. Distinguish different activities of clinical psychologists.

General Competencies

6. Classify basic theoretical approaches and principles of psychological assessment and counselling in various areas of applied psychology.
7. Assess the mental status and classify the different diagnostic criteria for mental disorders.

Introduction to Communication Sciences

86090

Lecturer in Charge

Izv. prof. dr.sc.
Danijel Labaš

Course Description

The main objective of the course is to introduce students to the communication sciences and communicology as an interdisciplinary and integrative science that seeks to address and improve communication opportunities, while the specific objectives of the study course are providing insight into the historical and contemporary communication and communicology themes and dynamics in order to master the basic knowledge of the area so as to enable the students to access and analyze communication on all its levels: intrapersonal, interpersonal, social and media.

Study Programmes

- » Sociology (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 1st semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Analyze and compare the historical development of communications and communicology
2. Reproduce the fundamental concepts of intrapersonal, interpersonal, verbal, non-verbal, social media communication;
3. Argue the importance of knowing the dynamics of communication;
4. Describe the role of verbal and non-verbal communication in daily life;
5. Analyze and interpret verbal and non-verbal communication;
6. Use the acquired knowledge of the relationship between interpersonal communication and communication through new media;
7. Evaluate the quality of interpersonal communication;
8. Analyze and compare the communication relationships in dialogue and persuasion;

10. Argue the reasons why it is necessary to know the dynamics of communication in everyday and business environment.

General Competencies

Students will become familiar with the anthropological, philosophical and communicology approach to the communication at all levels. They will especially be well versed to properly use verbal communication and learn to properly evaluate and interpret non-verbal communication in different social and cultural environments. Students will be able to use arguments to express the importance of knowledge of communicology and will develop skills of critical perception, presentation and analysis of modern communication and dynamic models, particularly in relation to interpersonal communication and communication through new media.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Introductory lecture: introduction to the subject, a division of literature, presentation of students duties and required efforts;
2. Communication, its philosophical and anthropological foundations and features of communication;
3. From interpersonal communication to the communication of society (philosophical base and historical development);

Grading

Students may pass the exam by passing two tests yielding 45 points each (minimum 50% of correct answers is needed). Students who don't want to pass exam via tests, and students dissatisfied with test results, attend the written final exam whose volume, content and pertaining ECTS points correspond with the requirements of tests conducted during the semester. The attendance of at least 70% lectures is minimum requirement, while regular class attendance yields up to 10 points. Final course grade is determined by the following points collection arrangement: Excellent 91-100 points; Very good 80-90 points; Good 69-79 points; Sufficient 56-68 points; Non-sufficient 55 points and less.

Course Description

After attending course and passing the exam, students will differ, describe and critically evaluate main terms and ideas of human development theories and their implications on work with children, parents and educators. They will understand factors and processes that cause developmental changes and acquaint methods of development research. Also, they will acquaint main features of pre-natal development and describe and explain, based on relevant theoretical models and research, the main changes in cognitive, physical and social-emotional development during infancy.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Distinguish development theories regarding their contribution to the explanation of human development and the utilization of scientific research methods.
2. Describe and explain developmental changes in abilities, experiencing and behavior that are proceeding during infancy.
3. Apply the knowledge of physical, cognitive and social-emotional development of children in infancy onto organizing the surroundings and inclusion of children into activities that stimulate their development.
4. Rate the influence of parental actions on children development and implications of the early development research results onto work with children, parents and educators.
5. Compare orderly development, individual differences in development and developmental difficulties in areas of physical, cognitive and social-emotional development in first two years.
6. Value the methods of researching development of children's perception, cognition, temperament and attachment in infancy age and their advantages and disadvantages.

General Competencies

1. Outline the historical development and theoretical approaches in the different branches of theoretical and applied psychology.
4. Identify the characteristics, mechanisms and models of psychological development and evaluate the effects of various biological and social factors on the physical, cognitive, social, and emotional development.
8. Integrate the knowledge of cultural differences and critically assess the general principles, standards of good practice and work which demonstrates respect for diversity in a professional manner.
19. Express the necessity of lifelong learning and professional development.

Grading

Knowledge will be tested during the semester through homework with written exam, upon completion of the course. If a student fails to hand over all homework, he/she cannot take the written exam.

General Competencies

Upon successful completion of the course, students will: Improve the ability to apply knowledge in practice. Develop specific analytical and research skills. Be able to effectively collect data and manage information. Be able to effectively analyze social phenomena. Develop team work and interpersonal skills. Develop the ability to work independently. Develop problem-solving skills. Develop a concern for the quality of scientific research. Acquire specialized knowledge necessary to perform research activities within the social sciences and further training. Be able to effectively carry out research and organize time. Be able to effectively manage research projects. Develop problem-solving skills. Develop oral and written communication in the mother tongue.

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Marija Brajdić

Course Description

During the course students will learn how to design a research project based on draft research design; how to choose the best method for collecting of the data while being able to explain the advantages and weaknesses of different methods; how to build the instruments for gathering of the qualitative and quantitative data; apply the basic logic of sampling in both qualitative and quantitative approaches; understand the purpose and ways of generalizing the data findings in both qualitative and quantitative approaches.

Students will carry out their own simple research project on purposive sample while respecting the basic principals of research ethics, and will write a report on their research findings. Throughout the practical tasks students will learn the research methods in social sciences but also gain an insight into social research as primarily practice of social relations.

Study Programmes

- » Sociology (Studij) (required course, 4th semester, 2nd year)
- » Sociology (Studij) (required course, 4th semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Apply theoretical perspectives and previous research findings as the basis for the development of goals and purpose of research
2. Design a research project by using the best mode of observation to answer a specific research question
3. Design instruments for the collection of the data in qualitative and quantitative research
4. Apply the logic of probability and nonprobability sampling
5. Interpret validity and reliability in quantitative and qualitative research
6. Apply the highest ethical standards of social research
7. Arrange the gathering of qualitative and quantitative data
8. Analyze and interpret qualitative and quantitative data
9. Formulate an answer to the research question
10. Write a comprehensive report on the research findings

Course Description

The aim of the course is to provide insight into the proper conduct of social research methods and to train the students for the proper use, evaluation and interpretation of obtained data. The course objective is to introduce the students to the basic concepts in statistics and the techniques which are necessary for various applications in the field of communicology.

Study Programmes

- » Communication Sciences (Studij) (required course, 2nd semester, 1st year)
- » Croatology (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 2nd semester, 1st year)

- » Psychology (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 2nd semester, 1st year)
- » Sociology (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 2nd semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define, describe and apply the basic methods of social research.
2. Apply the statistical literacy and methodological competences and realize their importance in the modern society.
3. Employ the basics of statistics in order to use the media on the reflexive and productive level.
4. Apply statistical thinking within the framework of an educational process.
5. Use a computer and basic statistical programs.

General Competencies

Apply the knowledge of the basic concepts of the methods in social science and statistics. Employ the basic methodological and statistical knowledge and techniques which are used in the practice of communicology, with an emphasis on the interpretation of statistical indicators, particularly those contained in the standard computer printouts. Define, describe and apply statistical thinking. Use the acquired skills of methodological presentation and communication (written and spoken). Use precise statistical ways of expression. Use a computer and the programs for the processing of statistical data. Organize data complexes into a coherent whole. Define research topics for scientific research in communicology.

Kant

117072

Lecturer in Charge

Prof. dr.sc.
Zvonimir Čuljak

Course Description

Course objectives are to provide students with an insight into Immanuel Kant's philosophy, primarily into his version of epistemological anti-realism and of deontological foundation of ethics as well as his influence on contemporary philosophy.

Study Programmes

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain Kant's reasons for accepting "transcendental idealism", i.e. anti-realism
2. Differentiate the concept of judgment of contemporary logic from Kant's epistemological concept of judgment
3. Compare and recognize relationship between perception and thinking in Kant and in the context of contemporary philosophy
4. Explain the connection between Kant's philosophy and the development of modern science
5. Express arguments about Kant's positive and negative understanding of metaphysics
6. Explain Kant's contribution to the theory of knowledge and ethics
7. Analyze and critically assess the advantages and shortcomings of Kant's analysis of philosophical problems and the arguments he used to solve them

General Competencies

After completing the course, students will be able to: (1) understand and connect the basic problems of epistemology, metaphysics and ethics with their solutions as offered by Kant; (2) explain the relevance of Kant's conception of knowledge and action for the conceptual analysis of knowledge and action in philosophical tradition, as well as in cultural and scientific context of contemporary world; (3) recognize and evaluate the importance of Kant's philosophy for the basic existential questions, pertaining to every individual, about the knowledge of truth and justified action.

Week by Week Schedule

1. Introduction: Immanuel Kant's work.
2. Kant's program of 'transcendental philosophy': founding of metaphysics and other sciences.
3. Kant's theory of perceptual cognition and theory of space and time ('transcendental aesthetics')
4. Elements of Kant's philosophy of logic, theory of concepts and epistemology/theory of cognition - structure and functions of understanding ('transcendental logic').
5. Kant's program of transcendental conceptual analysis: theory of judgments, concepts and categories ('analytic of concepts').
6. Transcendental deduction of categories.
7. Perceptual conditions of the application of categories ('schematism', 'transcendental power of judgment').
8. Kant's philosophy of science: principles of science as synthetic judgments a priori ('analytic of principles')
9. Kant's epistemological anti-realism (phenomenalism): thing in itself vs. phenomenon.
10. Kant's criticism of rationalist metaphysics: 'paralogisms', 'antinomies' and 'ideal' of 'pure reason' as a „dialectical illusion'(review) ('transcendental dialectic').
11. Problem of determinism and free will according to Kant's third antinomy – Kant's founding of ethics.
12. The relationship between theoretical and practical reason according to 'transcendental dialectic'.
13. Kant's philosophy of mathematics according to 'transcendental doctrine of method'.
14. Kant's methodology, (meta-)epistemology and meta-philosophy ('canon of pure reason').

Language and Style Practicum

130703

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Vladimira Rezo

Course Description

The aim of the course is to convey to the students the theoretical and practical knowledge of Croatian standard language with special emphasis on its polyfunctionality and on its use in mass media. Language will be viewed primarily from point of view of its functional, social, individual and territorial multifacetedness. The main part of the course will consist of the comprehension of grammar and linguistic norms of the Croatian standard language so that the students will later be able to apply them in their writing, but also in verbal communication.

Study Programmes

» Communication Sciences (Studij) (required course, 1st semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define the main characteristics of the Croatian standard language
2. Identify functional styles present in Croatian standard language and their particular features
3. Select the appropriate language aids in solving linguistic and stylistic issues
4. Use linguistic norm of standard Croatian language
5. Distinguish between good and bad linguistic expression
6. Apply the knowledge in their written and oral communication

General Competencies

Acquire and deepen theoretical knowledge of the Croatian standard language and its characteristics of autonomy, standardisation, spatial stability and the elastic stability in time and polyfunctionality. Students will reinforce their proficiency of norms pertaining to the Croatian standard language. Students will be able to utilise their knowledge in everyday communication.

Grading

During the course and exam students will face sentences and short texts of classical Latin and it will be expected of them to accurately read the text, recognize forms and simple syntactic function of certain parts of sentences. On demand they will morphologically analyze each word; based on consulting reference literature they will fit the sentence in the context of civilization; finally, with understanding and respect to the rules of the mother tongue translate the given text. These skills will be assessed during the semester and the final exam.

Grading

During the course, at each meeting short assignments are being written (for + or mark) with the possibility of the joint work, during the semester three individual assignments are written (for a numeric mark). By written assignments and written exam mainly technical skills are checked, whereas at the oral exam the understanding of concepts and problems is checked.

Prerequisites for

Logic 2

General Competencies

After successfully finished course students will be able to (1) interpret the role of logic and logical concepts in philosophy, (2) apply logical formalization to simpler, concrete examples from the philosophical literature.

Week by Week Schedule

1. The concept of logic, logical language, and inference (2+2)
2. Syntax of the propositional logical language, proposition (2+2)
3. Semantics of the propositional logical language, truth (2+2)
4. Translation of Croatian sentences into the propositional logical language (2+2)
5. Validity, consequence, truth-tree (2+2)
6. Provability, inconsistency and propositional deduction (2+2)
7. Syntax of the first-order logical language, formula, quantifiers (2+2)
8. Semantics of the logical first-order language, first-order truth (2+2)
9. Translation of Croatian sentences into the logical first-order language (2+2)
10. Logical opposition and the square of opposition (2+2)
11. Semantic properties in the first-order logic and first-order truth-tree (2+2)
12. Deductive concepts and first-order deduction (2+2)
13. First-order logic with identity (2+2)
14. Methods and procedures in first-order logic with identity (2+2)
15. Formalization of definite descriptions, uniqueness and numbers (2+2)

Course Description

(1) To prove the main meta-theoretical results about first-order logic, (2) to make students familiar with the problems of algorithms in logical methodology (2) to make students familiar with the basics of higher-order logic, its properties and motives. On the ground of this, the aim is to show how to approach to ontological problems by means of logic.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define magazines and periodicals.
2. List, apply and identify common codes and standards of journalistic writing for magazines and periodicals.
3. Distinguish, in theory and use, between reporting for daily newspapers and that for magazines and periodicals.
4. Define and know the work of a magazine or periodical editorial staff of and a development process.
5. Demonstrate the knowledge and use of a news writing style in reporting.
6. Define, explain and apply the skills of editing a text.
7. List, identify and use typical magazine and periodical forms.
8. Demonstrate knowledge of and apply journalism ethics for work in magazines and periodicals.

General Competencies

Apply knowledge of the basic concepts of communication sciences and journalism related to the subject; Identify and describe the place and the role of journalism and mass media in society; Explain and critically analyze the acquired theoretical and practical knowledge; Identify, explain and analyze the situation, innovations, challenges, and issues in the media and journalism; Apply acquired journalistic skills in reporting for magazines and periodicals;

Course Description

The course is a monographic study on Croatian renaissance playwright Marin Držić with references to all of his non-literary and literary texts. Course is divided into sections concentrated on the most important points of Držić's life, all of his dramas will be studied in according to the knowledge of normative poetic and than in relation to the situation that reigned in their own time in visual arts, in music, sciences and this will be connected with the state of spiritual and ideological consciousness. Special attention will be paid to the erudite strata with regard to the possible parallels between experiences of Siena humanistic circle and Držić's results in his Sheppard dramas. During the course will be studied the forms of political consciousness in the Renaissance and their reflection on the reality of Dubrovnik and Držić attempts to change the rules of the game with the power. Students will investigate the impulses that Držić could receive from his predecessors at the scenes of Dubrovnik and his parody of their models and scenic languages. Special attention will be given to the multi-layered Držić's messages. During the course will be studied the circumstances and the iconographic consciousness during the performances. Insight will be taken to the concept of Renaissance from Burckhardt book on Culture of the Renaissance in Italy to the latest views on this epoch produced in the studies of new historicism. Attention will be given to the concept of mannerism in Držić's plays, as well as intertextual relations in his plays to the most important authors of his time Pietro Aretino, Thomas Morus, Niccolo Machiavelli and Baldasare Castiglione. The generic system of renaissance drama will be studied due to the standardization of comedy and tragedy, and the so-called. middle genre, pastoral drama. There will be described and studied numerous thematic domain in Držić' texts emphasizing the glossary in which will dominate fortune, conspiracy, utopia, love and beauty. Držić's place in the Croatian literary canon and cultural history will be established during this course and the students will become aware of the canonization process of Držić that was specially intensive in the last hundred years and was subject of various ideological strategies.

1. Establishing Držić's place in the Croatian and European literary canon. Contributions of Đuro Matijašević, Ignjat Đurđević, Saro Crijević, Sabo Dolci, F. M. Appendini, Šime Ljubić and Franjo Petračić's edition of Držić's dramas in 1875. Rešetar's contribution in the fixing of Držić's opus. Questions of authorship and their resolution. Partially preserved texts. Lost literature of Croatia.

2. Writer's biography is analyzed on the basis of all known sources. The assumption about the year of the writer's birth. The lacunae in the documents from author's maturity to the unclear circumstances of his death in Venice after the conspiracy against the rulers of Dubrovnik. Analysis of some key documents: the

Media Convergence and Digital Journalism

86130

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Jelena Jurišić

Course Description

The increasing presence and popularity of technologies such as broadband, mobile internet, social networks and IPTV fundamentally change the way we work, that we have fun and the way we consume media. The convergence of media is no longer future, but rather a framework in which modern media and mass communication operate. What occurs is intertwining, merging and combining of various media with the help of telecommunications functionally into one. Ultimately, the convergence of media results in a change of the organization of media, content and manner of its distribution, habits and the role of consumers, who from consumers of media content become “prosumers” and, also, in new approaches to media management, advertising, marketing and public relations. The main objective of this course is to familiarize the students with this new framework, which has changed the mass media and journalism in general, but also communicology, which previously studied media as separate media platforms, and now must study them as a combination of multiple platforms and accordingly adjust research methodology. The students will also be introduced to the rules and regulations imposed by the new media and consumers themselves, and the knowledge of how to create a rounded digital identity in the 21st century (of a journalist, as well as of a media product). Accordingly, the students will during the course acquire knowledge and skills that are necessary for their work in a converged media environment and so they could exploit the opportunities offered to them on individual platforms, and ultimately allow them to create their own media product during the course, adapt it to various technological devices and place it on the market.

Media Relations

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Tomislav Janović

Course Description

The aim of the course is to explain the importance of media relations by applying the relevant communication theory and the contemporary model of public relations. The introductory lectures will present also the historical development of media relations, which enables the students to gain insight into the differences with the contemporary model of media relations, which is the subject of teaching in this course. Contemporary model are based on research: both media and organizations. Therefore, students will be introduced not only to the importance of research, but also to methods of analyzing both the media and the organization. Furthermore, the mediation of information as well as the information management process will be explained more closely. In this context, the vertical and horizontal flow of information within the organization will be defined. Also, the basic values needed to achieve quality relations with journalists will be highlighted. For a contemporary model of media relations, strategic planning and valuation methods are of crucial importance, therefore to these topics will be also given a significant space. With particular emphasis on form and style, students will be introduced to the most important tactics in media relations, such as press releases, interviews, press conferences. Organization's web sites and organization's social networks will be also included.

Course Description

The main objectives of the course are to introduce students to the basics of the non-experimental methodology and the different modalities of its use. Through lectures, students will get to know the basics of the non-experimental methodology, the reasons for its use, and basic designs through which it is applied. Students will also be acquainted with the way of conceiving non-experimental research and writing a report or research paper based on it.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain the non-experimental designs and different modalities of their use
2. Analyze the different segments of non-experimental research approaches
3. Evaluate the non-experimental studies
4. Apply non-experimental designs in their own research
5. Create the research that will make advantage of the non-experimental design

General Competencies

9. Evaluate scientific knowledge for the purpose of generating research hypotheses and support the scientific approach to the acquirement of knowledge.
10. Judge scientific and professional papers in the field of social sciences, humanities, and biomedicine.
11. Analyze the assumptions and apply consistent methodological and statistical knowledge for the purpose of answering specific research questions, and determine the advantages and limitations of different research and statistical methods in psychology and related scientific disciplines.

Course Description

Explain to the students theories and the basic premises of the study into the fringe areas of human cognition and the importance of psychologists in explaining these phenomena to the general population. Compare the scientific and pseudoscientific approach to the "parapsychological" phenomena and familiarise students with the methods and results in from some of the most prominent areas of research (i.e. EASP, near-death experiences, supernatural beliefs, and astrology) as well as the positivist tenets of science and cognition. We will aim to integrate findings from social, developmental, cognitive and evolutionary psychology in order to explain the origin and the function of the belief in the paranormal. We will defragment specific parapsychological phenomena, psychological mechanisms in their background as well as the dangers stemming from the belief in such phenomena and the techniques used by the fraudsters to deceive the general public. The course will highlight the importance of scientific methodology, statistics and critical thinking necessary for future academic citizens.

Study Programmes

- » Psychology (Studij) (elective courses, 1st semester, 1st year)
- » Psychology (Studij) (elective courses, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Develop the general competency of differentiating science from pseudoscience and fraud
2. Develop specific competencies of recognising the most frequent parapsychological phenomena, their explanations and possible adverse effects
3. Compare and evaluate argumentation in the effectiveness and truthfulness of various parapsychological phenomena
4. Differentiate reliable from unreliable sources of information in regard to parapsychological phenomena
5. Apply the given knowledge in solving problems that involve parapsychological phenomena
6. Analyze pseudoscientific characteristics, logical inconsistencies and empirical shortcomings of parapsychological arguments

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 1st semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Describe human sensory system and the way how sensation is formed.
2. Compare different sensory systems regarding to stimulus, sensory organs, the way sensation is formed.
3. Explain perception of depth, perception of shape, perception of motion, and constancy of perception.
4. Explain connection between stimulus and sensation.
5. Describe phenomena of attention.
6. Compare different perceptive illusions and explain their background.
7. Analyze subjective factors of in perception.
8. Name typical perceptual disorders.

General Competencies

Outline the historical development and theoretical approaches in the different branches of theoretical and applied psychology.

Explain the biological and neurobiological foundations of psychological processes and behaviour.

Integrate the knowledge of the fundamental psychological processes and characteristics (perception, memory, learning, motivation, emotions, personality, and social behaviour).

Week by Week Schedule

1. Review of theoretical approaches to perception
2. Stimuli, senses, perception
3. Specific characteristics of different senses and sensory systems
4. Measurement of senses, classic and modern psychophysics
5. Attention and perception

Grading

The written exam is 70% of the final grade, and the oral exam is 30% of the final exam.

Course Description

The goal of the course is to introduce students to basic problems and views in philosophy of language (e.g. how the reference works, what determines the meaning of expressions, distinction between literal/conventional and non-literal meaning, the dispute between descriptivists and direct-reference theorists), to point to the importance of philosophy of language for other philosophical disciplines (such as metaphysics, epistemology, philosophy of mind, and meta-ethics), and to prepare students for their independent study of philosophy of language.

- » Sociology (Studij) (elective general foundation courses, 1st semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. List and explain the central problems and views in philosophy of language
2. Argue independently about issues in philosophy of language
3. Apply the arguments and methodology of philosophy of language in epistemology, metaphysics, logic, ethics etc.
4. State the major authors and the literature within the discipline
5. Define key concepts in philosophy of language
6. Construct key arguments and problems

General Competencies

After they pass the exam, (1) the students will be able to connect the content of the course with some of the philosophical disciplines they encountered before (most notably, formal logic, metaphysics, and epistemology), (2) the things they will learn in this course they will easily apply in other philosophical disciplines and courses, (3) they will be able to engage in interdisciplinary investigations, and use their knowledge of philosophy of language in doing sociology, psychology, linguistics, croatology etc.

Political Economy

37737

Lecturer in Charge

Prof. dr.sc.
Luka Brkić

Course Description

To introduce students to the basic categorical apparatus of economic science. In addition to the standard basis of performance of micro and macroeconomics study captures the relationship between economic and political processes, stressing the importance of economic theory for understanding political decision. Special attention is paid to the importance of microeconomics, which has for understanding public policy. Categories such as efficiency and inefficiency of the market, monopoly, externalities, marginal costs, are an integral part of the analysis of public policies in contemporary political science. Likewise, the study of macroeconomic categories such as economic growth, employment, net exports and inflation, it is necessary for understanding the modern rule and governance. Economic policy has become a key dimension of the government's actions, and therefore an indispensable element of sociological studies. The study is based on analysis of the main economic categories, without thorough exposure to the development of theory and methods throughout the history of economic thought. The main objective of the study is to introduce students to the basic concepts of economic and non-mathematics analysis of micro and macroeconomics. The case is essentially similar cases now begun economy or Principles of Economics that are running on the faculties of economics.

Grading

Students who achieve 10/13 presence at the seminar classes also generate 5% of the results achieved by checking the knowledge (the second colloquium is not counted in attendance). For example, if a student assessment on the first colloquium was 8/10 points, while the second also 8/10, this means that the material is passed with 80 percent success. Assuming that student regularly attended the seminar classes (10 meetings) and produced an essay / book review, student is credited with 10% of the final grade, and instead of a very good (4) The student achieves excellent (5). To pass the exam student needs to collect a minimum of 50% of the test within the framework of each colloquium. Good (3) 60-79%, very good (4) 80-89%, excellent (5) - 90-100%. There is no possibility of correction of exams, or repeat exams in which the student failed to meet the conditions for passing.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain the basic categorical apparatus of microeconomics and macroeconomics.
2. Use learned of categories for the purpose of political-economic analysis of the political process.
3. Apply the solution of practical examples in the field of macroeconomics, such as the calculation of the CPI, the rate of productivity, the effect of taxation on inequality in income distribution, use graphs of supply and demand, price elasticity coefficient.
4. Analyze monetary and fiscal policy.
5. Analyze the economic effects of public policies.
6. Distinguish between political elements of economic trends.

General Competencies

Upon successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

Use general knowledge about society and social processes. Prepare the information society in a meaningful whole in written and oral form. Explain cause-and-effect relationships among social phenomena. Explain the key structural factors that shape society.

Course Description

Introduce students to the sociological theories of post-industrial society according to D. Bell, A. Touraine, M. Castells and J. Fourastié. Enable students to acquire and apply the theories and basic sociological concepts of postindustrial society. Teach students how to operationalize these concepts using examples of empirical research on changes in social structures that lead to post-industrial society.

Study Programmes

» Sociology (Studij) (required course, 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain theoretical concepts and empirical models of post-industrial society.
2. Explain and evaluate concepts and empirical research on the changes in modern division of labor, socio-economic and socio-professional structure.
3. Evaluate the impact of technology on social change and the importance of an interdisciplinary approach to research these topics.
4. Write research on changes in the socio-professional structure.
5. Analyze the data from the research and interpretation of the results.

General Competencies

Use the general knowledge of society and of social processes.

Explain the key structural factors that are shaping society.

Explain the social change using classical and contemporary sociological approaches.

Practical Ethics [Ethics]

79250

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Tomislav Janović

Course Description

Course objectives are to provide students with basic knowledge about standard problems of practical (applied) ethics, especially with the utilitarian approach to these problems advocated by Peter Singer in his influential book Practical Ethics. Problems to be dealt with in the course are: the foundations of preference utilitarianism, the principle of equal consideration of interests, wrongness of killing in general, moral status of non-human animals, abortion and moral status of embryo and fetus, euthanasia, rich and poor, the refugee issue, protection of environment, means-ends reasoning in ethics, reasons for being moral.

Study Programmes

» Philosophy (Studij) (elective courses, 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Summarize the central problems of contemporary practical ethics
2. Distinguish questions typical of normative ethics and from questions typical of practical ethics
3. Illustrate unique features of applied ethics and its differences to other branches of ethics and philosophical disciplines
4. Analyze the main features of preference utilitarianism and compare them with features of other approaches to applied ethics
5. Use the basic terminology of applied ethics.

General Competencies

After completing the course, students will be able to:

- (1) explain the importance of ethics and applied ethics for assessing the life-style of contemporary humans and the advances of science;
- (2) recognize the assumptions of applied ethics originating from other philosophical disciplines (e.g. metaphysics, metaethics, political philosophy and philosophy of mind),
- (3) integrate practical models of ethical reasoning into the general philosophical ability of critical thinking.

Course Description

The overall objective of the course is to identify morphological and functional organization of the brain in practice, with particular emphasis on structures important in the processing of complex mental functions in humans. Specific objectives are elaborated per lecture subjects.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Recognize and identify fundamental parts of the central nervous system, the main morpho-functional division of the cerebral cortex, laminar organization and basic morphological properties of neurons in the human cerebral cortex;
2. Recognize and identify on the map of the human cerebral cortex functional specialization of different areas;
3. Recognize and identify the main structures of the limbic system;
4. Apply their knowledge in practical work using different instruments for brain imaging (MRI, fMRI, PET, MEG, EEG);
5. Use of multimedia web educational materials of the field of neuroscience in the preparation of presentations;
6. Create multimedia presentations with clinical examples that show the correlation between damage / dysfunction of specific brain areas and functional failure;
7. Analyze (basic level - recognition of basic structure) brain imaging records.

General Competencies

3. Explain the biological and neurobiological foundations of psychological processes and behaviour.
4. Identify the characteristics, mechanisms and models of psychological development and evaluate the effects of various biological and social factors on the physical, cognitive, social, and emotional development.
13. Value the basic contents from the complementary social, humanistic and biomedical disciplines.

Proofreading and Editing

173444

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Vladimira Rezo

Course Description

The aim of this course is for the students to implement their knowledge of orthographic and linguistic norms of Croatian standard language acquired during their studies by making an assessment of diverse texts, to gain practical experience in editorial and proofreading activities and to learn what they can edit in a text and how they can do it so the given text complies to the norms of the Croatian standard language. With constant practice during classes and doing their homework assignments, students will gain the basis for editing and proofreading, and also learn how to constantly improve their techniques. There will be at least one opportunity to talk with an editing professional.

Course Description

Main objective of this course is introducing students to basics of psychological measurement: definition and basic concepts, and short overview of psychological constructs and their measurement.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain what is a psychological test and understand ethical implications of psychological testing
2. Identify scaling techniques, be able to analyse their advantages and flaws
3. Explain basic metric characteristics of psychological tests and their relationship
4. Use independently computer programmes for data analysis
5. Recognize basic psychological constructs and tests that measure them
6. Evaluate psychological instruments

General Competencies

Analyze the assumptions and apply consistent methodological and statistical knowledge for the purpose of answering specific research questions and establish the advantages and limitations of different research methods and statistical methods in psychology and related disciplines.

Critically assess scientific insights for the purpose of generating research hypotheses and support the scientific approach to the acquisition of knowledge.

Psychology of Addiction

51161

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Renata Glavak
Tkalić

Course Description

To acquaint the students with contemporary knowledge about the complex phenomenon of substance abuse and addiction, required to participate in the organization of prevention programs for youth; and also conducting diagnostics, participation in treatment, and the immediate implementation of individual and family counseling.

Study Programmes

- » Psychology (Studij) (elective courses, 1st semester, 1st year)
- » Psychology (Studij) (elective courses, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define substance abuse and addiction.
2. Differentiate and describe the basic notions related to addiction.
3. Classify different drugs into categories and describe the effects of different types of drugs on psychological functions.
4. Explain different factors that influence drug abuse and addiction.
5. Analyze the consequences of substance abuse and addiction.
6. Argue different approaches to the addiction treatment.
7. Analyze different types of addiction prevention programs.
8. Identify and explain the findings and possible specificities of relevant Croatian studies, in the context of foreign research, who have made a significant contribution to the development of psychology of addiction.

General Competencies

Identify the characteristics, mechanisms and models of psychological development and evaluate the effects of various biological and social factors on the physical, cognitive, social, and emotional development.

Value the basic contents from the complementary social, humanistic and biomedical disciplines.

Psychology of Adulthood and Aging

38640

Lecturer in Charge

Prof. dr.sc.
Jasminka Despot
Lučanin

Course Description

The aim of the course is to introduce students to the knowledge on physical, cognitive, emotional, and social development in early, middle, and late adulthood from the lifespan developmental perspective. Through the course, the students will be acquainted with different theoretical approaches to the development in adulthood and ageing, different factors that affect adult development, and research methodology in the field. Students will also acquire knowledge on developmental problems in adulthood and ageing. This course should enlarge the knowledge of students on developmental changes in adulthood and ageing, and consequently offer them the opportunity to develop and enlarge their own professional attitudes and skills.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 5th semester, 3rd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define characteristics of physical, cognitive, emotional, and social development in early, middle, and late adulthood.
2. Differentiate specific research methodology in developmental psychology in relation to the research in other fields of psychology.
3. Explain research results in the adulthood and ageing psychology in accordance with knowledge in developmental psychology.
4. Relate adulthood development theories to the previously acquired knowledge of developmental psychology theories.
5. Compare developmental tasks in early, middle, and late adulthood.
6. Apply the acquired knowledge of the adulthood and ageing psychology in research, and in professional task demonstration.
7. Explain, individually and in teamwork, theoretical and research findings of the adulthood and ageing psychology
8. Analyze and compare the Croatian and international research results in the field of lifespan developmental psychology and explain cross-cultural similarities and differences.

Psychology of Childhood and Adolescence

37809

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Eva Anđela Delale

Course Description

After completing the course and passing the exam, students will understand the principles of human development and know the changes in the physical, cognitive, social and emotional development and personality development in early childhood, middle and late childhood and adolescence. Students will acquire skills that enable them to distinguish between typical development and developmental problems in children and adolescents and to identify developmental risk and protective factors at the individual, family, peer group and the wider social environment levels. Based on this knowledge, through individual work, seminars and group discussions, students will acquire the skills to plan activities to promote positive behaviour and prevent undesirable behaviour in children and youth.

Study Programmes

» Psychology (Studij) (required course, 4th semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Describe developmental changes in the physical, cognitive and socio-emotional development during early, middle and late childhood and adolescence;
2. Explain the mechanisms and processes underlying the changes in abilities, perceptions and behaviours during childhood and adolescence;
3. Choose appropriate approaches and methods to evaluate various skills, behaviours and attitudes in children and adolescents;
4. Compare normative development, individual differences in development and developmental problems in the physical, cognitive and socio-emotional development in childhood and adolescence;
5. Predict and evaluate the effects of biological changes, parents, family, peers, school and the wider community on the physical, cognitive and socio-emotional development in childhood and adolescence;
6. Identify developmental risk and protective factors, the problems and difficulties that can occur in children and adolescents and their causes and consequences;
7. Evaluate and recommend interventions at individual, family, school and society aimed at addressing the problems and difficulties in the development and the promotion of optimal development in childhood and adolescence.

Grading

Presentation based on research or field work is graded during the semester and it contributes 20% to the final grade.

Students' performance on two written exams during the first and the second half of the semester or one final written exam contributes 85% to the final grade. Students who successfully pass two exams during the semester are not required to take the final exam. Students who do not wish to take two exams during the semester, as well as those students who are not satisfied with their achievement on these exams, are required to take the final written exam. The scope, the content and the corresponding ECTS points of the final exam meet the requirements of two exams conducted during the semester. Minimum achievement for a passing grade is 50% of the maximum number of grade points. The final grade is calculated based on points earned/total points possible for exams and seminar paper, as follows: 50% to 61% - sufficient, 62% to 74% - good, 75% to 87% - very good, 88% to 100% - excellent.

General Competencies

Identify the characteristics, mechanisms and models of psychological development and evaluate the effects of various biological and social factors on the physical, cognitive, social, and emotional development.

Organize and present professional and scientific reports based on empirical data using scientific literature and demonstrating respect for international standards, independently or in a team.

Course Description

The aim of the course is to provide students with an overview of the types, theories and basic principles of human learning. To compare human learning with that of animals and machines. To integrate findings of applied research on learning within the context of one of the three main approaches to the study of learning: behaviorism, cognitive learning and social learning. Upon course completion, students will be familiar with different types of learning and will be able to recognize their application in everyday life.

Study Programmes

Rationalism and Empiricism

159314

Lecturer in Charge

Prof. dr.sc.
Mislav Kukoč

Course Description

The aim of this course is to acquaint students with the leading philosophers of the Early Modern period and their capital works. Historical and intellectual context of the early modern philosophers will be presented. The main philosophical preoccupations of rationalist and empiricist philosophers will be explained, their agreements and disagreements will be outlined. The salient concepts employed by the rationalists and empiricists will be explained, their main theses and arguments elucidated. By reading and commenting on the selected passages from the main works of the leading rationalists and empiricists, students will solidify their understanding of the main philosophical terms, theses and arguments of Early Modern Philosophy. Another aim of the course is to demonstrate how to approach texts of classical philosophers in a scholarly and critical manner.

Study Programmes

» Philosophy (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain the philosophical questions and concepts introduced by early modern philosophers
2. State the role of the rationalist and empiricist philosophers in the “scientific revolution”
3. List and evaluate the main arguments of the leading rationalists and empiricists in metaphysics and epistemology
4. Compare and contrast metaphysical and epistemological doctrines of the leading rationalists and empiricists
5. Recognize the philosophical questions and concepts that contemporary philosophy inherited from early modern philosophers

Religious Architecture in the Middle Ages

158254

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Tomislav Popić

Course Description

The course objective is to present the liturgical area inside the church buildings and his transformations and changes during the Middle Ages (since the beginning of Christianity until the end of Gothics). Especial attention goes to the relations between the form and the church liturgical service for examined architectural elements. Why is the form always in the service of liturgical practice? The objective is to present the process in which the form, material (stone, marble, metals, wood...), light/darkness and shadow, odor... became elements for creating every detail of the sacred interior which has only one intention: to serve the Church community in their liturgical services.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Define basic elements of the Middle Age church building
2. Analyze the liturgical role of crucial church building architecture elements
3. Analyze different forms of crucial elements through their history and define motives of their transformations
4. Analyze architectural solutions through the medieval church literature and define their connections
5. Define the meaning, role, significance and position of the church building in the life of the medieval city/village religious man.

Semiotics in Mass Communication

86092

Lecturer in Charge

Izv. prof. dr.sc.
Danijel Labaš

Course Description

The main objective of this course is to provide insight into the basic knowledge of semiotics, with special reference to its interdisciplinary nature, understanding it as a point of blending of life sciences and the science of signs (T. Sebeok). The specific objective of the course is to prepare students to understand semiotics as a science, general semiosis and communication systems, as is reflected in the broad range - from everyday communication over a public (and mass) communication to the aesthetic structure of language, image and sound signals - in order to evolve a character into a sign and recognize opportunities of semiotic interpretation of texts of all kinds of media (print media in general, front pages, promotions, photos, music, film).

Study Programmes

- » Communication Sciences (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)
- » Communication Sciences (Studij) (required course, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Analyze and compare historical development of semiotics and its content
2. Explain basic author approach to semiotics and basic concepts such as sign and symbol
3. Argue importance of familiarity with knowledge of semiotics in the study of communication sciences
4. Describe the role of signs and symbols in everyday life;
5. Analyze and interpret signs and symbols in print media, promotional materials and photography
6. Use the acquired knowledge on semiotic interpretation of mass media
7. Estimate quality and capabilities of application of stereotypes and manipulation through media
8. Analyze in critical manner the media content from the semiotic point of view
9. Argue the reasons for importance to be familiar with semiotics of mass media

Prerequisites

Introduction to Communication Sciences
Originators of Communication Sciences and Their Works

Prerequisites for

Theories of Media and Mass
Communication

General Competencies

Students will learn about the semiotic point of view at the human being who is animal symbolicum - a being of symbol, because human is the only one with the opportunity and ability to create symbols and think and live in a world of symbols. Since the language, myth, art, religion and media are parts of that universe, and symbols become part of human communication, students will be trained not only to notice, but also correctly interpret the various signs and symbols conveyed to us daily by the media in different social and cultural environments. Students will be capable of arguing the reasons why it is necessary to have knowledge about the semiotics of mass media, and will develop skills of critical perception, presentation and analysis of media ranging from printed media to new media through which signs and symbols can be created, but also to manipulate, stereotype and ideologize modern society .

Week by Week Schedule

1. Introductory lecture and introduction to the subject course, presentation of required reading and duties
2. History of semiotics I
3. History of semiotics II
4. Sign, symbolism, symbols, meaning;
5. Semiosys. Semiotics: systems of symbols and communication process;

Society and Sustainability

159877

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Marija Brajdić
Vuković

Course Description

This interactive and multimedia course begins with an overview of scientific data on climate change and its future projections as well as the debate on climate change as an epistemological and ethical question. Climate change is then addressed by linking it to the dominant model of development, introducing students to contemporary debates on the limits to economic growth, varieties of capitalism and related phenomena including inequalities, sustainability orientations, the consumer society and questions of social justice. Drawing on insights from ecological economics, political ecology and contemporary social theory we discuss alternative developmental models whose starting point are limits to natural resources.

The course then focuses on the political implications of the current, ecologically unsustainable, model of development. Protests and social movements are discussed, artistic practices, as well as new public policies and political actors advocating for a turn towards sustainability. Special attention is given here to education for sustainable development.

The final part of the course is dedicated to thinking about the society of the future in the framework of literature on utopias/dystopias.

This interdisciplinary course draws on insights from sociology, economics, political science, philosophy and basic physical sciences in order to illustrate the complex interrelationship between the natural and the social world and identify alternative models of development.

Study Programmes

» Sociology (Studij) (elective courses, 3rd semester, 2nd year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Explain the basic physical trends relating to climate change
2. Evaluate critically the key disagreements relating to climate change
3. Identify and describe the social, cultural and economic causes and consequences of climate change
4. Evaluate policy measures (local and global) which are implemented to address climate change from various perspectives (ecological and economic stability, political strategies, ethical implications)

Sociology of Croatian Society 1

37766

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Andreja Sršen

Course Description

Sociology of Croatian Society 1 is the first of five steps during the whole of the study that is directed to acquiring knowledge (accomplishments) on the structures and processes within the Croatian society, from the sociological standpoint. From this basic thesis follow elementary objectives:

1. Give students knowledge (accomplishments) on the social structure of the Croatian society and the processes unfolding within this structure, since 1990 to the present moment
2. Give students knowledge (accomplishments) and insights on the dominant processes in the Croatian society, from 1990 to the present moment.
3. Elaborate forms of social disintegration, vertical (social strata) as well as horizontal (regions and micro-regions of Croatia) – on this occasion explain specially:
 - a. the phenomenon of corruption as a destroyer of every society, and so the Croatian society;
 - b. development trends of the quality of life in Croatia and the process of massive impoverishment of people within the Croatian society, in modern neo-liberal, planetary political and economic context, and
 - c. processes of weakening of the human production substance of the Croatian society, from 1990 up to the present moment.
4. Introduce the students with historical and present Croatian regions;
5. Give empirical knowledge on the relation of the centre and periphery in Croatia;
6. Elaborate the concept and practice of the Croatian social identity, and give them knowledge on the topic – Globalisation disrupts local identity;
7. Give knowledge on the topic – Political sustainability as inwardly shaped identity (example Croatia).

Course Description

Introduce the students to the process of globalization and its impact on the society. Globalization is a process the effects of which are felt in all areas of life. A large number of authors associate the globalization with new political architecture of the world and the overall U.S. monopoly in it. The globalization process strongly influences the social, political and economic situation in Croatia, because Croatia as a democratic society is open to all positive and negative impacts in the environment. The process of globalization is over three thousand years old and has changed its characteristics. The modern globalization came into force after the collapse of the communist system in Europe and the involvement of communist China into the global economic system. The globalization is a social phenomenon that has positive and negative effects and strongly influences the change of the place and role of the nation state in the modern society.

Sociology of Identity

159874

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Andreja Sršen

Course Description

The course Sociology of Identity is focused on the analysis of individual and social identities from sociological starting point of view. A sociological approach to self and identity begins with the assumption that there is a reciprocal. Relationship between the self and society. The focus of the course is on how social structure influences one's identity, and in turn, behavior. More attention is being given to understanding the development of multiple role identities and their outcomes for individual behavior. Therefore, the basic objectives of the subject are:

1. Outline the knowledge about the basic concepts of identity from different scientific perspectives.
2. Define the insights into the dominant social processes that have an impact on the formation of social identity.
3. Demonstrate the knowledge of the relational nature of identity
4. Elaborate different forms of social disintegration, both vertical (different social groups) and horizontal (policy) - especially when it explains the different fields of social and individual identity;
5. Apply the historical relationship between the society and individual to a culture that represents the intersection of the formation of different identities;
6. Classify and compare the insights on contemporary empirical research in the field of social identity;
7. Explain the social identity of Croatian society, with emphasis on the impact of globalization processes of the local identities.

Course Description

The objective is to acquaint the students with classical sociological theory with the emphasis put on the contemporaneity of classical theoreticians and to ensure they acquire knowledge, skills and competences in order to be able to analytically and critically master classical theoretical concepts, basic sociological terms, and theoretical paradigms on the level of operative application. This means the students are prepared for the study of sociological theories (classical and contemporary) of other special sociological disciplines on later study years as well as for the writing of a paper on the level of a book report.

Study Programmes

- » Sociology (Studij) (required course, 2nd semester, 1st year)
- » Sociology (Studij) (required course, 2nd semester, 1st year)

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Interpret the widest range of classical theoretical perspectives in sociology aware of their philosophical origins.
2. Argue the importance of developing critical (self)awareness and interdisciplinary approach.
3. Sum up the dialectical interconnectedness and interdependence of theory and practice.
4. Describe the socio-historical context of the origins and developments of sociological theory.
5. Interpret the relevance of the French revolution, political revolutions, and the industrial revolution in the context of the newly appearing social sciences.
6. Define the basic sociological concepts of Henri de Saint-Simon and Auguste Comte.
7. Interpret organicism and basic sociological concepts of Herbert Spencer, evolutionism in sociology, social Darwinism and the theories of state formation.
8. Define basic concepts of the formal German and American sociology (Chicago school).
9. Analyze the basic concepts of structuralism.
10. Define the basic tenets and concepts of functionalism in sociology.

Theoretical Systems in Psychology

37799

Lecturer in Charge

Doc. dr.sc.
Nina Pavlin
Bernardić

Course Description

The aim of the course is to provide students with the overview of the development of psychology, psychological insights and schools of thought through discussion and analysis of development of different paradigms and schools, shaped into theoretical systems in psychology. The aim is to create competences for the critical analysis of the main "classical schools" and theoretical systems in psychology, based on knowledge, with an emphasis on their comparison. Particular emphasis is on determining the impact of different theoretical approaches, models and paradigms on the contemporary state of academic psychology, development of scientific research in psychology and general development of modern psychology.

Course Description

Playing happily is almost a universal activity by which people are engaged throughout history in different cultures and in completely separate social groups. Games of chance existed since there is human society. If one (unproductive) human activity has managed to maintain throughout the entire history of mankind then it is justified to assume that it fulfills some very important personal and social needs that could not and can not be otherwise met.

The aim of this course is to familiarize students with the emergence and development of games of chance sociology, its core concepts, the main representatives and the sociological understanding of games of happiness and their meanings in contemporary (Croatian) society.

In addition, attendees will be introduced to a series of theoretical perspectives on which sociologists rely on when explaining the phenomenon of happiness games - as a "safety valve" from workload; as "deviant adaptation" to a state of non-norms or alienation; as an integral element of the working class culture that is trying to overcome the lack of success and security; as a way for players to test their luck and skill; and as an effective opportunity for self-fulfillment and creativity lacking in the workplace

Course Description

Religion is an integral part of human culture. So talking about religion means talking about culture, and talking about culture means talking about society. The task of this course is to empirically explore the 'dead' and 'live' religions in the totality of their historical and contemporary manifestations and their relation to other areas of life as culture and society. The core of this course is the history of religion. In this context, students need to get an overview of the general history of religion. In order to achieve this, it is necessary to make a chronological review of indisputable historical facts characteristic of certain religions, to get acquainted with the tradition and the most significant feasts of these religions. However, because of language barriers we will not be able to identify the religious traditions through the original texts in which they are expressed. We will use the existing literature available to us.

Here it is necessary to go from the fact that knowledge of religion is the need of contemporary culture. For wherever we go, and with whomever we meet, whether he is from Croatia or from another country, we will not be able to avoid the conversation about the culture of the country we are coming to, nor even talk about religion as the fundamental educator of that culture. This conversation will not lead to theological settings, but we will simply notice that almost everything in the modern society is so intertwined with the religious that you are alone and can not visualize it. It is not only religion that is cult, which is presented in rituals. Throughout history, but still today, world literature and art: painting, sculpture, construction and social life have been and are strongly related to religion.

We live in a country where people's lives and their culture are based on the plantations of western European Christian civilization. Suppose Christianity is known to us at least in the most important points. But that assumption can be disenchanted. We must also start from the fact that the Second Vatican Council adopted a statement that "people expect from different religions to respond to the hidden mysteries of human existence: on issues such as: who I am, why I am at all in this and this world, what is the meaning and goal my life, why I have to suffer, so much suffering, misery, lack of fear, why so many wars, why is death, is this death a reward or punishment for a lived life, is there life after death, or has a man in life at all happy moments , is luck just a thoughtful noun? "So the fundamental question is to ask every religion to answer the question: who are we, where did we come from and where do we go from?

We will not ask for this answer in our lectures. In our lessons, which will be just one introduction, and I hope a good incentive for students to further engage with individual religions, we will try to show each religion "as it is" and explore how some of them gave answers to the above issues. We will see that all religions do not give the same answers to the same questions and that all questions are not equal to them etc.
